AWARD WINNING INDIE FLICK LANDS THEATER RELEASE

"Lunatics, Lovers & Poets" is a truly personal and independent feature film. A gritty honest story of love & redemption inside the Scottish family, offering a bit of laughter alongside the heavy dysfunctional journey of a tormented main character Seamus MacGregor.

Shot on film, this is a visually beautiful film with a wonderful musical score and great performances that grab a hold of that universal nerve inside all of us and give a little tickle when it gets too painful.

Lead actor, Cotter Smith is superb and was nominated for 'Best Supporting Actor' at The Method Fest Film Festival and he can currently be seen in the critically acclaimed play "Next Fall" at the Helen Hayes Theatre on Broadway. Leif Gantvort was nominated for 'Best Actor' at The Method Fest Film Festival and you can see him in an upcoming episode of "Desperate Housewives."

Said director John Scoular: "the performances are seamless, for anyone who has followed Cotter Smith's television career for the last thirty years you will find Cotter unrecognizable as the alcoholic, homeless Shakespeare reciting 'Scotty MacGregor', I've seen the film countless times and he still makes me cry. Leading man Lief Gantvoort cut forty pounds and hired a personal trainer, he showed up on the first day of shooting looking like a prize fighter, I mean who does that for an Indie Film?"

"Lunatics, Lovers & Poets" has been to nine film festivals and won three awards, including 'Best Screenplay' at The Method Fest Film Festival, 'Best in Show' at the Real to Reel International Film Festival, and 'Aloha Accolade' at the Honolulu International Film Festival.

The heart behind this intense and beautiful indie flick is writer/director John Scoular and his production company, TamDerek Films. TamDerek is run by John and his wife, producer and actress, Madeline Scoular.
